1	I find the stakeholder sessions the most useful as you get to hear different perspectives. Open houses and online surveys have a definite role but they tend to be solo activities (i.e. perusing the story boards).	8/21/2018 1:43 PM
2	Sometimes difficult to know how much our feedback is taken into consideration, and to choose between the options provided. Its nice to have the opportunity to preview these projects though. Please ask for public feedback on the issue of opening the Portage and Main intersection to pedestrians before making a decision! I personally feel like that would be a huge mistake. Traffic is already a snarl at that intersection, and pedestrians frequently disregard traffic signals downtown. Pedestrians can either go underground, or walk 1 block (not so far!) to cross at street level.	8/19/2018 6:27 PM
3	Councillor Mayes did a great job.	8/19/2018 2:18 PM
4	The conferences had little time for questions. Having forms online or some way to have your voice heard would be good. Say if you use social media or have a number to call, or can fill out forms with your thoughts.	8/18/2018 10:33 PM
5	I usually leave when the 'discussion' starts to deteriorate. People have not listened to what has come before and cannot get off their own agenda, sometimes becoming rude and obnoxious. Nothing informative happens once that has started.	8/17/2018 11:22 AM
6	The process dealing with land use was effectively carried out	8/17/2018 6:39 AM

Public Engagement Newsletter Question of the Week 4

7	I appreciated having all of the information that was available at the event. It did seem, though, that some of the people there were not sufficiently knowledgeable to answer questions.	8/17/2018 12:39 AM
8	Several engagements, some more meaningful than others	8/16/2018 11:25 PM
9	It was like talking to a wall. NO empathy, NO active listening. Obviously bored city representatives and no way were they going to listen or accept any suggestions, no matter how valid. You speak of "balanced", but put more weight on what the rest of the city, with no stake in the project, has to say over the locals. What is more important? People who have to live with a stupid decision daily, or someone who seldom MAY have to deal with it, in passing. "Consistency", to the city, just means ignoring locals equally, except when the decision impacts a city councillor, THAT gets extra attention.	8/16/2018 10:43 PM
10	The experience varied. Sometimes it was not meaningful at all. Sometimes the questions were worded in ways that made it almost impossible to answer with a yes or a no.	8/16/2018 10:31 PM
11	There is rarely any councillors at these session and no one with financial information. I want to know how much is being spent on these projects, and how they are planned to unroll.	8/16/2018 9:49 PM
12	The time between the survey completion by me and the decisions made at City Hall is long. When the project milestone is passed, I no longer remember what the questions were nor my responses, so I have not yet noticed if my engagement has been meaningful.	8/16/2018 8:05 PM
13	In a few instances the input from the majority in attendance was not reflected in the summary. It tends to be information sessions not real consultation.	8/16/2018 7:49 PM
14	I like these little short survey/opinion pieces you should keep them coming year round.	8/16/2018 6:36 PM
15	The online survey regarding the new strategic plan for Recreation and Parks had an interactive map that made it very difficult to find the pool in our neighbourhood. Many residents told me they gave up because the interface was too cumbersome.	8/16/2018 5:48 PM
16	Helped me to understand some things going on in the city.	8/16/2018 5:27 PM
17	Experiences have ranged from Somewhat Meaningful to Very Meaningful. I've often found that when discussing roadway plans, precinct plans which would have been very helpful in adding context, were not displayed. Likewise, the city's proposed bike network is often not shown at many roadway projects.	8/16/2018 5:06 PM
18	public opinion was not relevant to the city officials	8/16/2018 5:00 PM
19	It is encouraging to have the opportunity to voice thoughts about city matters. High time.	8/16/2018 4:57 PM
20	It seemed that the outcome of the process was pre-determined. The public participation was a sham.	8/16/2018 4:57 PM
